British Master of Wine Tim Atkin presides over the 33rd Chablis Wine Competition

Tim Atkin is a writer, journalist, taster, and globetrotter, but above all, he is passionate about wine. He returns to Chablis every year to sample the new vintage and we are delighted that he has agreed to come back on Saturday 19 January as president of the 33rd edition of the Concours des Vins de Chablis wine competition.

This event is unique in that Chablis producers are not permitted to judge the wines themselves. The 86 tasters include journalists, restaurateurs, sommeliers, traders, enologists, and amateur wine buffs. There are two phases to the competition. Firstly, all the samples are tasted. Then those with the best scores are sampled again by a “super jury” which selects the award-winners.

The winning wines are used by the Bourgogne Wine Board (BIVB) for promotional events both in France and abroad, and act as ambassadors for Chablis wines for a year.

Tim Atkin began his career in wine in the 1980s. A Master of Wine, he has won multiple awards, has been named the Glenfiddich Wine Writer Award on several occasions, and Wine Columnist of the Year by the Wine Guild of the United Kingdom.

Over a career spanning more than three decades, Tim Atkin has established an international reputation. In addition to his writing and wine-related journalism, he is also a public speaker and photographer, and has his own website at www.timatkin.com where he posts the tasting notes from his vineyard pilgrimages.

Tim Atkin is an accomplished taster who speaks French and Spanish and has been on the jury of many competitions and tastings in countries around the world including the UK, France, the USA, Italy, Argentina, Spain, South Africa, Chile, and Australia. He is also copresident of the celebrated International Wine Challenge.
